

New Bill Legalizes Government Propaganda and Disinformation on American Citizens

May 22, 2012

The next defense authorization bill to be proposed by the American congress contains a not-so-publicized amendment that would legalize the use of propaganda on American citizens. The bill would indeed nullify an existing law that (supposedly) protects U.S. audiences from misinformation campaigns conducted by its own government. In other words, Americans could now be subjected to the hardcore, massively manipulative and disinformation-filled propaganda that is usually reserved for foreign countries such as Iraq. Yes, the American public is the new “enemy” to brainwash and the internet will be an important battlefield.

Readers of this site might ask: "Since when Americans were NOT subjected to propaganda?". That is a true assessment. Most of the articles on this site effectively describe how mass media products are filled with propaganda and disinformation that is communicated to the American public. The new bill would however legalize the process, making it official and out in the open. While propaganda in the United States was always somewhat covert and disguised as something else, the new bill apparently seeks to form an actual Orwellian Ministry of Truth, where propaganda is just part of daily business. Here's an article on the "propaganda" bill.

Congressmen Seek To Lift Propaganda Ban

Propaganda that was supposed to target foreigners could now be aimed at Americans, reversing a longstanding policy. "Disconcerting and dangerous," says Shank.

An amendment that would legalize the use of propaganda on American audiences is being inserted into the latest defense authorization bill, BuzzFeed has learned.

The amendment would “strike the current ban on domestic dissemination” of propaganda material produced by the State Department and the independent Broadcasting Board of Governors, according to the summary of the law at the House Rules Committee’s official website.

The tweak to the bill would essentially neutralize two previous acts—the Smith-Mundt Act of 1948 and Foreign Relations Authorization Act in 1987—that had been passed to protect U.S. audiences from our own government’s misinformation campaigns.

The bi-partisan amendment is sponsored by Rep. Mac Thornberry from Texas and Rep. Adam Smith from Washington State.

In a little noticed press release earlier in the week – buried beneath the other high-profile issues in the $642 billion defense bill, including indefinite detention and a prohibition on gay marriage at military installations – Thornberry warned that in the Internet age, the current law “ties the hands of America’s diplomatic officials, military, and others by inhibiting our ability to effectively communicate in a credible way.”

The bill’s supporters say the Critics of the bill say there are ways to keep America safe without turning the massive information operations apparatus within the federal government against American citizens.

“Clearly there are ways to modernize for the information age without wiping out the distinction between domestic and foreign audiences,” says Michael Shank, Vice President at the Institute

The new law would give sweeping powers to the government to push television, radio, newspaper, and social media onto the U.S. public. “It removes the protection for Americans,” says a Pentagon official who is concerned about the law. “It removes oversight from the people who want to put out this information. There are no checks and balances. No one knows if the information is accurate, partially accurate, or entirely false.”

According to this official, “senior public affairs” officers within the Department of Defense want to “get rid” of Smith-Mundt and other restrictions because it prevents information activities designed to prop up unpopular policies —like the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan.

Critics of the bill point out that there was rigorous debate when Smith-Mundt passed, and the fact that this is so “under the radar,” as the Pentagon official puts it, is troubling.

The Pentagon spends some $4 billion a year to sway public opinion already, and it was recently revealed by USA Today the DoD spent $202 million on information operations in Iraq and Afghanistan last year.

In an apparent retaliation to the USA Today investigation, the two reporters working on the story appear to have been targeted by Pentagon contractors, who created fake Facebook pages and Twitter accounts in an attempt to discredit them.

(In fact, a second amendment to the authorization bill — in reaction to the USA Today report — seeks cuts to the Pentagon's propaganda budget overseas, while this amendment will make it easier for the propaganda to spread at home.)

The evaporation of Smith-Mundt and other provisions to safeguard U.S. citizens against government propaganda campaigns is part of a larger trend within the diplomatic and military establishment.

In December, the Pentagon used software to monitor the Twitter debate over Bradley Manning's pre-trial hearing; another program being developed by the Pentagon would design software to create “sock puppets” on social media outlets; and, last year, General William Caldwell, deployed an information operations team under his command that had been trained in psychological operations to influence visiting American politicians to Kabul.

A U.S. Army whistleblower, Lieutenant Col. Daniel Davis, noted recently in his scathing 84-page unclassified report on Afghanistan that there remains a strong desire within the defense establishment “to enable Public Affairs officers to influence American public opinion when they deem it necessary to “protect a key friendly center of gravity, to wit US national will,” he wrote, quoting a well-regarded general.

The defense bill passed the House Friday afternoon.

CORRECTION: The amendment under consideration would not apply to the Department of Defense, though the it is attached to a defense authorization bill.

What is the designation of the disinformation bills being considered?? We need the "HR" or whatever designation being discussed in this article. Smith-Mundt was already tweeted by two Senators, one R and one D during the Obama administration.

Welcome to the soon-to-be Militarized States of America folks. As my name goes, this was and is inevitable. We can aim to expect more bans on our rights in the years to come. Those who refuse to comply, I'm sure, will be heavily punished. Also expect to be monitored heavily for whatever you say and do; the information and internet age allows your movements to be tracked and meticulously followed. ID chips and bracelets are becoming more prominent you can also expect that to be a replacement for credit cards and social security status and information. Don't even try denying it because it has already started taking place in the wealthier areas: It just hasn't made hardcore headlines yet. Thanks to God I don't give about it at all because in the end I am only here to spread the good news that none of this matters as long as... Read more »

No. Stop going along with the whole 'inevitable' and 'nothing we can do' apathetic nonsense.

You practically don't even have to lift a finger to completely change and transform this world. Use your social media account to start raising awareness and exposing what's going on. We CAN change this, easily, even. All this world's problems are hoaxes and the only reason we haven't solved them yet is people accepting the system. So, stop doing that. And start taking action.

Once we reach the breaking point where more people listen to alternative news than the mainstream news this whole fake reality will come crashing down. Get started!

Thanks for posting this Vigilant, it's bad enough that they do it illegally, but trying to make it legal is adding grievous insult to injury. As of this writing it has an additional sponsor, one dana rohrbacher of california. I would encourage fellow readers to scour around other bills etc. and see what other evils are lurking that aren't even noticed, since congress can't be relied on to screen these things, it's up to we the citizenry to root out the filth.

The Government does not need a bill to legalize propaganda or disinformation. They do it through different forms of media, as Vigilant knows. They aren't obligated to give us accurate information. Keywords – "Private Interests". So this bill is irrelevant anyways.

🕒 5 years 4 days ago ^

It was done preemptively....to ensure they wouldn't be sued or tried for war crimes for psychological operations they were already committed to. Take, for example, the "incubator baby" conspiracy of the early 90's. That little act of theatre resulted in the deaths of 1.2 million Iraqi children in just 5 years of sanctions. That was a war crime ,since there was absolutely no legitimate justification for it. The government lied to the public in order to "earn" the broad based support they needed to invade Iraq and impose sanctions. YouTube "incubator baby conspiracy". It's extraordinary. And it happens all the time.

Hey Vigilant – Have you heard about the new Senate bill proposed by Senator Thomas F. Omara (R) of New York? His proposed bill seeks to put an end to "Anonymous" posting/commenting on the internet by requiring webmasters/administrators to ask their message board commenters to post their real full name, home address and IP address and telephone numbers alongside the anonymous comments they post. If the commenter doesn't comply, then their anonymous comments should be deleted. LOL! What do you think about this, Vigilant? They say the aim of this bill is to put an end to "anonymous" cyber-bullying, but, really, I think they are seeking to have total control over the internet to keep truth seekers from visiting websites (like yours, for example) in search of the truth about what's going on. And also, I think the crooked politicians just can't stand to know that people are talking and... Read more »

It's not as though there is any kind of intimidation or fear being used when you have to list your name, home address and phone number when you voice opinions that you already know will be unpopular with the globalist elite who are known for making people they disagree with just sort of....disappear.

Nope, no intimidation there at all – and no chilling effect on free and the unrestricted flow of ideas in a Constitutional Republic. It is so revealing just to watch how these elitists think – well, that is if you would actually call it thinking.

They are very sick, evil and care only about themselves, that much we know.

Well, the propaganda and disinformation would only work if people were paying attention to it. Nobody pays attention to the mainstream media anymore because we know it is ALL LIES, and nobody cares about the (propaganda) movies being churned out by Hollywood. We are not idiots; we know they are drastically inflating box office receipts for movies – only to make people think movies are blockbusters and everyone should run out and see them. The only shocking thing about this is that they believe it is time now that they can let it out in the open and no one (or very few) will even notice, or care. This could be all the proof you need that their propaganda has already been very successful. And maybe it is just another layer of propaganda, designed to "comfort us" when we hear that it has been voted down...and therefore, we no longer have to worry, since it is not "legal" yet. One way or another, as we know with SOPA, they will not just give up on these ideas simply because they know most people don't want it. And you my friend, are a complete sheeple that is utterly blind. If the government wouldn't do such a thing, then why was such a bill passed. You'd have to be a complete fool to actually believe that the government is actually for the people...

A few of my facebook friends are buying into that Kony thing—got their ID bracelets and all. There has to be a reasoning for this, $$$ perhaps? There's almost always a monetary incentive involved.

while their propaganda increases, books of wisdom will also continue to increase, internet sites on good information and 'vigilant' will continue to grow. the choice will be left to us to choose from an ocean of information. i know where to be enlightened, so i am safe. i also have the bible which is the master of all wisdom and it is going nowhere. so, while they increase in propaganda, we will also increase in wisdom as it is written:

Luke 2:52

And Jesus increased in wisdom and in stature and in favor with God and man.

1. There is no Al Qaeda as such, it's purely a CIA construct, a bunch of Mujahadin created by the CIA renamed, it's a scientifically proven fact that 911 was an inside job.
2. Even if there was an Al Qaeda they're not pushing any discernible propaganda, all propaganda is pumped out by the Western governments to cover up the new world order.
3. It's obvious to anyone with an IQ over 50 that the internet crackdown is purely about globalist control of our information, not piracy.

That's what they want you to think...to become desensitized to it so that you won't care no more. That's how they're able to get away with so much

I saw the video of building 7 (wtc7) for the first time in 2007. I immediately realized something was wrong with what I had believed in for 6 years. It was then that I stopped watching t.v. knowing that it was something that could never be trusted again. Mark Twain
